Walla Walla Correspondence.

WALLA WALLA, May 23, 1865.

EDITOR OREGONIAN:

Looking over the OREGONIAN of the 17th inst., we notice that our letter of April 10th but recently "turned up" in the Portland sanctum. It affords us pleasure, however, to be able to state that its detention en route, be it attributable to what quarter soever it may, is certainly not due to any neglect or inadvertence of acting Postmaster J. Mason at this point: per contra, all who have daily transactions with the office here will unite with us in attesting the signal punctuality and faithfulness with which the affairs of the same are conducted. By the way, as a result of the progressive development and enterprise which have been inaugurated in this up-country during the past three or four years the business of the Walla Walla Postoffice has grown enormously, and has come to be considered a "big thing" of the times; in a political point of view aspirants do not fail to regard it as a concern of no meagre importance to them. But sufficient on this head.

Since the new "City Fathers" have donned their official robes, sundry ordinances have been claimed that are of special interest to the body politic, and that go far to evidence no little foresight and public spirit on the part of the "Fathers." At the meeting of the Council, May 11th, an ordinance was passed, signed by the President of the Board and duly approved by His Honor Mayor Thomas, organizing and incorporating Washington Engine Company No. 1. The Charter, which is abundantly liberal in its provisions, has been accepted by the Company. They held their first meeting, (agreeably with Sec. 11 of said charter,) and elected the following named officers for the ensuing year:

President, S. B. Fargo; Secretary, W. B. Kelly; Treasurer, H. Kohlhauff; Foreman, E. P. Allen; 1st Assistant, A. K. Brown; 2d Assistant, Charles Abel.

"CLOSING STORES ON SUNDAY."

Such is the title of a "leader" in the Walla Walla Statesman of the 19th current. This subject has been on the tapis now for something over two years; sundry attempts have been essayed, more or less spasmodic in character, to carry the matter through—a la signatures to papers sent from one store to another, etcetera, and so forth; but the thing failed—and why? You see, Mr. OREGONIAN man, that [illegible] feelings called "Mammon" triumphed over the religious scruples of the merchants—the thing couldn't receive the unanimous vote of the dealers, &c., and so it proved a "fizzle," and the very puerile and lame excuse was offered to the—Fathers that "all wouldn't sign it!" Well, sir, another trial is had, and we are now informed that the merchants have nearly succeeded this time, and it only remains for them to hear from an absent member of one of the largest establishments. Don't that beat the d—l?

Our candid opinion of all this "ado about nothing" is just this: If there be any merit and method in the thing itself—if it be really either morally or socially wrong to keep the stores open on the Sabbath, then let our worthy "Fathers" at once pass an ordinance ordering all the stores and other places of trade to be closed during the whole of Sunday. Should the "Fathers," however, not deem this movement a very popular one, and too apt to cause toadyism to shrug its shoulders, why then let some of the more consistent and high-minded of the merchants take the lead in closing their places of business, and let the rest follow the example, or let it alone, just as they please. A fair analysis of the whole matter seems to read as follows: "Oh! Mr. Public Sentiment, we confess we ought to shut our doors on Sunday—yes, we ought to remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy; but then, Mr. P., you see all those fellows down town won't do it, and while the country folks come in on Sunday and buy—why—why—why—we see want to get some of the greenbacks while they are going!" For a class of enlightened American and German citizens—Jews and Gentiles—living in a civilized land, where the voice of the press is heard, and religion prevails, to be hesitating in this way, does really seem to our mind as "small" and absurd in the extreme. A friend sitting near us, who is more inclined to poesy than ourselves, has promised us some parodical verses on the topic. When finished, they shall be duly submitted to you.

The result of the approaching territorial and county election, forms the all-engrossing topic of conversation among all circles; indeed, we may say, among all sexes, since the ladies of Walla Walla (God bless them) discuss the matter with "marked ability" regularly at the tea-table. We have noted down a dialogue, decidedly "rich and spicy," which came off between two of Walla Walla's "fair daughters" a day or two ago. They both move in the "first circle" here: one is an uncompromising rebel, while the other from the first has employed her tongue, if not her pen, in strong advocacy of the Union cause. Both of the ladies are well educated and properly cultured; and, in the polite sense of the term, are truly ladies. This interesting "dialogue" of theirs, together with the verses before mentioned, shall be forthcoming soon.

The Hons. A. A. Denny and S. Garfielde are expected to speak here this week. Hon. F. P. Dugan has been solicited to reply to them on the part of the "unterrified" of the county. The election occurs June 1st.

In a stroll around the confines of the city yesterday, we espied the Catholic Seminary, called "St. Vincent's Academy," located in the western section of the city. The academy is quite a handsome edifice, and with the church near by is enclosed by a substantial plank fence, taking in some ten or twelve acres of ground, kindly donated by Judge Baron, of this city. The school is guarded over by some six Sisters of Charity. They have a full complement of day scholars, and a number of boarding pupils from the Walla Walla, Touchet, Grand Ronde, Umatilla and other neighboring valleys. Religious worship is performed to a large congregation each Sabbath by the Rev. Father Halde.

Capt. Higgins, of the firm of Worden & Higgins, doing business at Hell Gate Ronde, arrived from the Bitter Root valley yesterday. He reports that when he started down great excitement prevailed among the inhabitants in regard to the discovery of gold mines on the head of Deer Lodge creek, and in the vicinity of Fort Owen, which is on the Bitter Root river. The general direction of Fort Owen from Walla Walla is about east; distance, some 375 miles. Deer Lodge lies east of this place, and by the wagon road may be reached some 100 miles from this point, or about 200 miles south west of Fort Benton, which, of course, is considered now as the head of steamboat navigation on the upper Missouri river. Mr. Higgins represents that these diggings are reported as rich. Several parties are preparing to leave for the above localities.

Capt. Waters' company of the Oregon Cavalry arrived at Fort Walla Walla on Saturday last. A portion of the company will go out as an escort to Mr. Odell's surveying party.

Farmers report that their crops received a small [illegible] of rain for a few hours on Saturday last. They add that the soil is very dry, and the crops will surely be short if a good rain does not soon come. Yours, AJAX.

FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 26, 1865.

President Andrew Johnson

All persons, save only that class of embittered partisans who never see in the object of their dislike, anything to applaud but everything to condemn, must feel an unusual pleasure, and a deep satisfaction, to observe that President Johnson is so rapidly gaining the favor and confidence of the people. It is no disparagement to Mr. Johnson to say that there were some misgivings and apprehensions lest he should not be able wholly to fill the place of his illustrious and lamented predecessor. It is no detraction from any man's abilities to suppose him not possessed of an administrative talent equal to that of him of whose great capabilities for his high station, we had had such convincing proof during upwards of four trying years. Of Mr. Johnson's patriotism, of his entire devotion to the single work of preserving his country, no one ever had a doubt. And whatever fears there were—if fears they can be called—that in his present position he might not prove equal to the full performance of the great duties devolved upon him, are happily being dispelled. He is daily growing stronger in public confidence. So far, his course meets the unqualified approbation of the country, and all are content to take what he has done during the past month as an earnest of his future career.

President Johnson's decisive manner of treating the rebel leaders and the rebellion, is giving universal satisfaction. It is plainly enough foreshadowed that none of those fugitives men who were the chief instruments in organizing and upholding the rebellion, will be permitted hereafter to exercise any the least political power in the United States. Mr. Johnson's course will not be needlessly harsh; his conduct will be the emanation of justice. He fully realizes that it is beyond the province of mercy to condone treason, that highest of crimes. He has hit upon the mean between unnecessary severity and too great laxity of punishment. In taking this course, he carries out the will of the people, and does his duty to the country and to those who have suffered so fearfully in maintaining the unity and honor of the Nation.

With the proofs which we have before us of Mr. Johnson's qualifications for his great office, and with the assurance for the future which his past course gives us, there need be no uneasiness about his entire ability to do his duty. There are vast trusts reposed in him, but his integrity is such that he cannot prove false to his past record, or disappoint the popular expectation. To the annihilation of slavery he is firmly committed, and this question had been so far simplified by the administration of his predecessor, that now, in relation to it, there is hardly a liability to err. His views are in all respects thoroughly national, and he has always discarded those ideas of narrow compass which bring a State into conflict with the General Government. From his past opinions and actions, and from his present course, we gather enough to justify us in placing a firm faith in his judgment and implicit confidence in his successful administration of the Government for the four years to come.

Agriculture in Oregon.

The time will come in Oregon when agriculture will be a pursuit more generally followed than it is now. As the country grows older, a greater proportion of the people will engage in farming, and comparatively fewer in the transient occupations which now give employment to so many throughout the State and the adjacent Territories.

For reasons obvious to the most superficial observer, this valley of Willamette is destined to become the most important agricultural region on the Pacific coast. It contains the largest amount of good land to be found in a body west of the Rocky Mountains. Its situation is such as to render ingress and egress easy, and its proximity to all the various markets that now exist, or can hereafter arise on these shores, will always cause it to possess an importance superior to that of any other agricultural district within the circle of the Pacific trade.

Before agriculture here arrives at the full height of its prosperity, some radical changes are, however, to be made. Some of these, the people themselves can accomplish; others can only be effected by the slow process of time. The natural growth of a country must be usually waited for, and it is of little use to try to force it forward by attempting to infuse into it a factitious vigor. But there are many things which can be done to accelerate the growth of the country, if the people will to have it so. The chief of these is to contract, rather than to expand the area of their land. In addition to the large tracts of land which the Government gave to settlers years ago, there has long been a controlling desire among them to extend the boundaries of their possessions in all directions, and the result is that men will not rarely be found who own thousands of acres of which they make no use whatever, and as a further consequence, are reduced to a kind of poverty by the very extent of the large tracts over which they hold dominion. By this accumulation of landed property in a comparatively few hands, the increase of population in the farming districts is hindered or prevented since the owner of numerous acres would rather buy more, if he can raise the wherewithal to do it, than to dispose of portions of what he already possesses.

A large rural population is Oregon's greatest need, and this it cannot have until a division of those tracts of land, can, by some means be procured. Even many of those who hold no more than their original donation claims, have a greater breadth of land than they make any good use of. Land in Oregon is of little value unless it is reduced to cultivation, and the outlying tracts that are to be found in some sections of this valley and elsewhere, are no consequence for pasturage—a use to which they are pretendedly assigned. Therefore it would be better for those who hold larger bodies of land than they can cultivate to dispose of all of which they can make no profitable use than to keep possession of the whole and thus deprive themselves of the advantages that would accrue were the population larger and socially better organized.

A better style of farming than now generally prevails, is also much needed. Of course it is useless to hope for amendment by those who have grown old in following the abominations of the old system, or rather of no system at all. There are many such, whom no logic can convince that there is any other course than the one they pursue. But these persons are slowly giving way to others, and the time will come when a more intelligent system of agriculture will have to be adopted, and the worthless and improvident compelled to go somewhere else. Whenever it is once brought to be such a pressing necessity that they can not evade labor, improvements will at once begin.

We need an accession to our population from abroad, and right here is the place for Yankee men and women with their industry and thrift to prosper and make a country.

DATES TO MAY 25.

Grand Review of Troops at Washington.

WASHINGTON, May [illegible].—At early [illegible] o'clock this morning the people assembled on Pennsylvania Avenue to witness the Grand Review. In front of the President's [illegible] stand was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Meade [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] flag [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] of the war [illegible]

Thousands of persons [illegible] lodging many from other cities, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] from the Capitol to the Executive Mansion, a distance of a mile and a half. The windows, housetops and all eligible positions are occupied by deeply interested people. All public business is suspended, and there is general holiday. The Capitol bore a motto [illegible] large letters:

"The [illegible] National debt we can never pay is the debt of gratitude we owe to the victorious Union soldiers."

At the North Capitol, at least 20,000 school children assembled near [illegible] and there was [illegible] [illegible] among them in pressing forward [illegible] [illegible] the soldiers. These children [illegible] songs to the troops as they moved along Pennsylvania Avenue. They presented a grand appearance.

All arms of the service were represented in full force, and an occasional mention of a body of Zouaves, served to relieve the sameness and gave fine effect.

Moving up the Avenue, there was a continuous moving line as far as the eye could reach, of National, State, Division, Brigade, Regimental and other flags. Some were new, with stars of gold glistening in the sun, and they contrasted strongly with the flags borne in the procession tattered in battle and hanging in shreds. Others were thickly covered with the names and dates of the battle fields where victories were won by these proud veterans. The flags and rifles were decorated with flowers, and many bouquets hung from the muskets. The troops did not, as to dress, present a war worn appearance. All were well and cleanly clad, and their line marching elicited praise from every tongue.

On the south side of the Avenue fronting the Executive Mansion, a stand was placed, handsomely and festooned with national flags at various points, with inscriptions as follows: Atlanta, Wilderness, Stone River, South Mountain, Shiloh, Vicksburg, Savannah, Richmond, Petersburg, and Cold Harbor. This stand was in front occupied by President Johnson, members of the Cabinet, Generals Grant and Sherman and other distinguished army officers. On the left were members of the Diplomatic Corps and their families, two hundred tickets having been issued to this class. Among the spectators on the stand provided for this purpose were George Bancroft and the following Governors: Crapo, Buckingham, Andrew, Fenton, Fairchild, Bradford, Curtin and Smith; Senators Wade, Sherman, Wilson, Johnson, Chandler, Harris, Hendricks, Dixon, Foster, Morgan, Conness, Lane of Kansas, and Representatives Schenck, Hooper, Maston, Lynch, Moore, Potter, Kelly, [illegible] and ex-Speaker Grow.

There were at least thirty naval officers holding the highest rank and as many army officers, including Generals Hancock, Wilcox, Cadwallader, Hitchcock, Newton and Rawlings. As the corps and divisions passed in review of the President and Lieutenant General Grant, the commanders severally left the column and took seats on the platform. The Judges of Courts, Chiefs of Government Bureaus, and other public officers were similarly accommodated. The crowd in that part of the city was extremely dense, being the main point of attraction and the [illegible] where was assembled the highest dignitaries.

Gen. Custer rode a powerful horse restive, and at times [illegible] When [illegible] the Treasury Department the animal suddenly dashed forward to the head of the line. Gen. New York Gold [illegible]

[illegible] this date, gives full [illegible] capture of that [illegible] noted rogue [illegible] Brown [illegible] from [illegible] swindling [illegible] which was [illegible] in his pocket [illegible] and finally [illegible] In 1857 he was [illegible] Brown [illegible] In 1862 he was at [illegible] of Marque [illegible] from Jeff Davis [illegible] from Victoria [illegible] at detectives [illegible] was brought back [illegible] and it is not known how far his [illegible] carried.

Military Companies in Portland. — Portland now has [illegible] or two companies of [illegible] and the [illegible] are that [illegible] of the State Militia [illegible] under Major [illegible] of Irish citizens, under the auspices of [illegible] military talent. [illegible] this evening [illegible] the company [illegible] [illegible] service of such [illegible]

Mining. — [illegible] on Front street [illegible] are inclined to the belief that [illegible] as noted for wealth [illegible] yielded astonishingly. The Kootenai gold is [illegible] at $18 and $19 per ounce [illegible] W. Buckley [illegible] that [illegible] were [illegible] Trains were met, however [illegible] by the parties bringing this information [illegible] reports are that relief has been afforded the [illegible] coming before this.

Assessor's Duty. — It is sometimes the case that [illegible] given the Assessor, in making his assessment of property, and the following examples may be [illegible] to parties in this city, showing them that [illegible] with the officers is the best policy [illegible] [illegible] Deputy County Assessor Millman [illegible] between [illegible] and Tenth streets [illegible] The Assessor [illegible] [illegible] of the law, Millman assessed the secreted property [illegible] in the hands of the Sheriff. That officer seized the [illegible] goods, and will proceed, in due course of law, to sell them to pay taxes and costs."

The Keans. — [illegible] letter to the [illegible] dated 17th April, gives the following genuine picture of the Keans and the public of New York: [illegible] The auction sale of seats [illegible] eleven nights engagement of Mr. and Mrs. Kean [illegible] Broadway [illegible] The private boxes brought a premium of $15 [illegible] each — that is, just double price. The [illegible] orchestra [illegible] sold for $2 50 each instead of $1. The 20 dress [illegible] sold, brought, besides the $2 each, a premium [illegible] each. In fact the first day's sales netted [illegible] much of this was humbug, though. Some few people were [illegible] to show off [illegible] by paying such extravagant prices, but the majority of [illegible] were "[illegible]" [illegible]

Runaway. — A dray-horse created great consternation [illegible] Front, Washington, and Third streets, yesterday [illegible] efforts to run the wheels of the cart [illegible] with a greater velocity than [illegible] the significant pointing off of [illegible] of that glass driving. The extreme rotary [illegible] was supposed to be about the time the [illegible] reporter on Washington street, when [illegible] made in quick succession, the animal [illegible] with great celerity, and the whole revolved [illegible] axis in a proportionate manner, gradually [illegible] until the entire "establishment" was lost in the [illegible] up Third street.

The Circus. — The entertainments at "Stark's Park," [illegible] Combination Circus Troupe, were concluded last [illegible] They have given the greatest satisfaction to all [illegible] been able to attend [illegible] performances [illegible] the best we have ever witnessed [illegible] and the [illegible] ponies, [illegible] dogs novel and attractive. After [illegible] we understand they will [illegible]

[illegible] Court. — Since Tuesday [illegible] cases have [illegible] of the Recorder [illegible] Warrant, [illegible] on a charge [illegible] fighting [illegible] Emeline [illegible] living on Second street [illegible] disorderly conduct. John McCabe was committed for two [illegible] and ordered to pay [illegible] for disorderly conduct.

Assault and Battery. — [illegible] before Justice Anderson on a charge of assault and battery [illegible] committed on the person of Frederick Wills, [illegible] received a fine of [illegible] and costs [illegible] violation of Ordinance No. [illegible]

The Fountain Chains. — Men were employed yesterday [illegible] taking a flag-staff over the [illegible] McCabe, [illegible] will be flown to the breeze again there.

The River. — Yesterday the water at this point had [illegible] just one inch. The Mountaineer learns that the [illegible] all the Blue Mountains, and that the water in [illegible] river and its tributaries is fast receding. The [illegible] Columbia river [illegible] expected, but [illegible] likely to create a general flooding [illegible]

[illegible] Homestead. — Property will never again be so [illegible] secured in Portland, as at this time. [illegible] over season. [illegible] columns which should not be overlooked by those [illegible] to secure a homestead.

[illegible] Portland. — [illegible] sold on [illegible] & Turpin, who also have a few for their [illegible] a large business. Substantial ones, adapted to the [illegible] streets and about the suburbs of Portland.

Steamboat Building at Canemah. — The Advertiser of [illegible] says: "Workmen have laid the keel of a large steamer, at the lower end of the [illegible] and it is intended [illegible] shall be ready for launching in three weeks."

Multnomah No. 2. DRILL this [illegible] evening at 7½ o'clock. W. [illegible] LEONARD, Sec'y.

Death of John B. Preston. — The Milwaukie [illegible] of the 17th April brings us the sad intelligence of the death by drowning of John B. Preston, first Surveyor General of Oregon. The paper mentioned states that he fell into a lock at Lockport, Illinois, on the [illegible] of April. Assistance could not reach him [illegible] the body was not recovered till the next morning.

Mr. Preston is remembered [illegible] in Oregon as an able, upright and efficient officer. He had the esteem of all who knew him. At the time of his death he was in the mercantile business at St. Louis, though previously he had been Superintendent of the Illinois Canal. He must have been on a visit to his old residence at Lockport at the time his death occurred.

From Ruby City. — A letter from Ruby City, May 5th, states that the snow is rapidly disappearing at that place. Business is being resumed. All the quartz mills are in successful operation.

A [illegible] [illegible] April, in the Eastern papers [illegible] appears [illegible] [illegible] April [illegible] were withdrawn [illegible]

THE LAST OF LINCOLN.—A Washington letter [illegible] New York [illegible] correspondent of the Argus [illegible] the following description of the last hours [illegible] harrowing [illegible] closing scene:

At about half past one o'clock I gained an entrance to the room at the end of the hall where the President was placed. Mr. Lincoln was lying diagonally across the bed, showing no signs of [illegible]. His features were fixed in that [illegible] which only the hand of Death can [illegible].

In another room still his wife [illegible] Mr. Lincoln was [illegible] many [illegible] during the night. She [illegible] her exclamations [illegible] were truly heart-rending. At one time while sitting by his bed [illegible] kept saying "Kill me! kill me! kill me too!" At another time I heard her ask him [illegible] speak to me [illegible]

But the [illegible] lips never parted [illegible] for he never regained [illegible] consciousness. [illegible] his chest there issued [illegible] the most [illegible] mournful moaning noises I ever heard and never shall forget.

Having had but little rest the several days previous, and being completely exhausted, at about daylight I went into the little chamber adjoining and [illegible] half an hour. I was [illegible] but was [illegible] by my friend [illegible] that Mrs. Lincoln had again been brought in and had [illegible] fainted. She was taken from the room, and [illegible] the last time [illegible] her husband alive [illegible] I again entered. The face of the dying had changed to a [illegible] pallor. The dark patch around his right eye had spread. His breathing had become shorter and less labored. That dreadful [illegible] had given place to a kind of wild gurgling [illegible] for a few seconds it would entirely cease and I would think all was over. Then it would resume, and thus these intervals would continue until at last, after an interval longer than any which had before taken place, the physician who was holding [illegible] hand whispered: "[illegible] has ceased beating." [illegible] in the expression [illegible] dead [illegible] and thus expired the Martyr President of the United States.

A SERIES OF MISTAKES.—The Southern Confederacy arose and fell upon a series of the most stupid [illegible] mistakes. The traitors thought the North would quietly submit to disunion. After this they boasted that the war should be prosecuted upon Northern soil. Let their own desolated country answer as to these mistakes. They believed cotton was king. Where is cotton now? Upon this they based their hopes that England and France would interfere. They were cured of this some time ago. They boasted of having a "homogeneous people" in the South. Jefferson Davis knows how far short they came of realizing this expectation. They repeatedly declared that the North would grow tired of the war and if it did not, that the money would give out. The steady stream of reinforcements for our armies and the premiums on our loans contradicted these. They thought the grass would certainly grow in the streets of Northern cities. The increased commerce and population of every Northern State destroyed this great hope. The rebels vowed that the negro would not and could not be made to fight. Fort Wagner, Fort Pillow, Petersburg and a dozen other battlefields established this error. They then tried to make him a soldier to fight for the continued enslavement of himself and his race. This bordered on the ludicrous. They declared one Southerner could whip five Yankees, but Lee's army thinks differently. They believed the North had no Generals, no statesmen, no courage. The war has told them differently. Last of all they sought to gain advantages by resorting to the vilest assassination recorded in history. That was their worst, as it will prove the greatest and most costly mistake of their whole career. The entire current of sympathy of the whole nation has been turned from tenderness and conciliation to feelings of bitterest hate. The death of President Lincoln by the bullet of the assassin has aroused the North to a new contemplation of the absolute fiendishness of the character of the traitors who plotted this rebellion. We might have forgiven previous atrocities. Even the cruelties of Forrest to the negro soldiers who were his prisoners, the outrageous and inhuman cruelties practiced upon our own brave soldiers held as prisoners at Salisbury, Andersonville and in Libby Prison, and the barbarities of Quantrell, Sue Mundy and Bill Anderson, the representatives of Southern chivalry; but the assassination of the President and the deadly blows aimed at the life of Secretary Seward have put new feelings and passions into the hearts of the people. The South will bitterly rue this mistake, and have ample occasion to regard all their other mistakes as insignificant in comparison.—St. Louis Democrat.

JEFF DAVIS ON TREASON.—Jeff. Davis, in the Summer of 1858, in Faneuil Hall, pronounced the following anathema upon traitors and treason, in language to be remembered now that he is captured. The confusion he then invoked upon traitors is now well turned upon himself, the chief of that odious crime. Thus by his own showing of six short years ago, Jeff Davis stands condemned:

Among culprits there is none more odious to my mind than a public officer who takes an oath to support the Constitution—the compact between the States binding each other for the common defence and general welfare of the others—yet retains to himself a mental reservation that he will war upon the principles he has sworn to maintain, and upon the property rights, the protection of which are part of the compact of the Union. It is a crime too low to be named before this assembly. It is one which no man with self-respect would ever commit. To swear that he will support the Constitution, to take an office which belongs in many of its relations to all the States, and to use it as a means of injuring a portion of the States of which he is thus the representative, is treason to everything honorable to man. It is a base and cowardly attack of him who gains the confidence of another in order that he may wound him.

ROBERT E. LEE.—The Chicago Tribune says of this graceless traitor whom many are now trying to bring into good repute:

Lee is an average Virginia slaveholder in moral character, nothing more. Before the war his chivalry only became known from the circumstance which went the round of the press that on one occasion when his overseer at Arlington refused to obey his order to administer the lash to a young slave woman who had attempted to escape, Lee himself seized the emblem of slavery and performed the ignoble task. During this war he has not performed a single chivalrous act. What Unionist in rebel hands has he befriended? But on the contrary, have they not starved under his eyes and rotted by disease when a word from him would have given them human prisons and life sustaining food? He is one of the guiltiest of the rebel fiends, and could we do it lawfully without a breach of our own national honor, we would hang him with patriotic pleasure. As it is he is safe. The Turks have executed their prisoners of war. Moors have enslaved them. Indians have massacred them. Any [illegible] for similar treatment of [illegible] he has received from want of reflection upon the [illegible] or [illegible] of surrender.

Dr. Holmes says in his new lecture that it should be no reproach to New England that she has many insane persons—the persons who fight the battles of thought will have them [illegible] killed and [illegible] wounded.
